Pine Tree League

Norway, 7-Mechanic Falls, 2

With Gene Hebert, the Holy Cross hurler, in action for Norway, that gang of Fiddlers slipped one over on Mechanic Falls at the fair grounds, Saturday afternoon.

Runs were scarcely the early chapter, but Norway fell into good luck in the fifth and caged four plums from an error or two and a brace of hits labeled for extra bases.

Mechanic Falls made several dangerous contacts and had runners along to third but the beans spilled. The lucky seventh was favorable for the Mechanics and three crossings were made when Shanahan drew a walk, Trundy doubled and both scored when Libby ripped a single in center field. Pratt's long drive into center for a sacrifice sent Libby over the pan. This capped the lid on run getting for the visitors.

Norway made another advance in the same inning and harvested three runs. Cole singled, stole second and crossed when Ken Aldrich slammed into center. Homer Aldrich, who hit the course for his brother, scored on Allen's single. The later reached second on a throw to the plate and made his mark on the plate after Millett filtered a grounder through Stiles at second base.

More Trouble in the League

Norway upset the tranquility of league baseball before the season opened and another commotion is liable to arrest the attention of fans if internal troubles are not quickly adjusted.

Oxford appears to be on the brink as "Doc" Doughty, the backbone of the situation there, has resigned as manager. Baseball material is scarce in town for players have moved away and there has been a dirth of local gamesters. To make up this deficit Oxford was allowed to hire three players beside the pitcher.

Mechanic Falls is in the process of revamping the personnel, and a surprise from manager Don Weston's camp may appear on parade before the week end. Lately the team has played slack behind Al Landry, who has pitched his arm off to keep the Mechanics from submerging under Norway and Paris.

Other shake-ups are said to be due along the line. Norway is well set with Gene Hebert, the Mechanic Falls hurling ace, season of 1928. Apparently everybody is happy with the prospects good for a climb on the ladder.

Norway 6; Wilton 6

Thirteen innings, then darkness, with the score 6-6 was the program at Wilton late Wednesday afternoon. The game was called with the teams locked in a grip that only the setting sun could break. Cy Abbott, the new product for Norway held the swatting Wilton 10 hits, one being a homer. Davenport of Wilton was less fortunate with his stuff and allowed the visitors 13 bingles including a two-bagger by Klament.

Wilton led slightly during the battle until Norway made it a tie 6-6 in the ninth. This was the last run for the day. Falls 3.

Baseball

The Ward 8 Sluggers go into action again Friday night when they stack up against a ten man team as the shop team Team from Mechanic Falls.

The shoe team has several familiar faces in the line-up including Irving Raymond at first, Albert Payne, catching, Pete Lapham at short-stop and Joe Beaulieu, pitching.

The Sluggers are composed mostly of high school players and a few of the Ward 8 Cubs. The Sluggers will be up against a ten man team as the shop team carry their own umpire, one Alec Locke.

The game will be called at 6 p.m., Daylight, on the old Ward 8 diamond opposite the camp grounds.

Saturday Races

Exciting horses races are expected at the fair grounds, Saturday, July 19, commencing at 1:30, daylight time. Four mixed classes are scheduled, namely 2:13; 2:16; 2:20; 2:24, trot and pace. Large fields are expected and the crowd will be there.

SNO-SHU CHAIRS BRING BUSINESS TO NORWAY

L. D. Gibson, manager of the W. F. Tubbs Co., attended the annual meeting of directors, stockholders and managers of the American Fork and Hoe Co. at Tru-Temper Inn at Walingford, Vt. Every year those conected with the well known company take their wives and enjoy four days of good fellowship and sports. During the time, sessions are held for discussions and suggestions relative to the business interests of every branch carried on by the firm whose headquarters are in Cleveland, Ohio.

It is of local interest that the Sno-Shu chair developed by Mr. Gibson at the W. F. Tubbs Co. has become one of the important numbers in the trade. Lightfoot, the firm of importers, have taken the chairs for Great Britian and an agency in South Africa has lately acquired a contract for the distribution in that country. The new Sandman model is the favorite with the Great Britian importer, and good returns are expected from Switzerland and France where orders have been sent. L. G. Treadway, who controls a chain of New England Inns, uses the chairs exclusively.

An encouraging sign is the kind reception given to the Alaskan snowshoe. This is a new narrow shoe manufactured at the W. F. Tubbs Co. but a decided improvement over the model used by the Alaskan Indians for a century. Almost like a paradox, Alaska is the country calling for this Norway, Maine product and several sizable orders have been sent there.

Miss Caroline Downing and Miss Mary Hill went to Ferry Beach, Saturday, to attend the Universalist Young People's Institute for the week.

Mrs. Louise Armitage, accompanied by two friends, Mrs. Agnes Bell and Miss Edith Merrill of Lawrence, Mass., have been spending the past week with Mrs. Armitage's aunt, Mrs. W. S. Pierce, Friday they all took a trip to Bethel calling on Mrs. Pierce's brother, William Bartlett, and other friends.

The Norway-Paris Band is engaged to play at South Paris, Dollar Day evening, July 19th, also give an outdoor concert at Harrison Village, evening of Monday, July 21st; also to play at Harrison Old Home Week, August 9th all day and evening.

Ralph S. Osgood spent the week end with relatives at Meredith Center, N. H. His mother, Mrs. C. E. Osgood, returned with him, Sunday night for a few days visit. Tuesday F. W. Sanborn, Walter C. Smith, Mrs. C. E. Twitchell and Mrs. Osgood went to Flints Camps at Wilsons Mills for a couple of days stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Kimball and two daughters, Thelma and Natalie, of Norway, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Kimball of Woodstock, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beck and Arthur Beck of West Paris went to Brownfield, Sunday, and visited the old Kimball place where Leon Kimball was born. This was the first time in 37 years that he was there.

KIWANIS NEWS

The Norway-Paris Kiwanis Club met this week at South Paris. George Harrison of the Portland Club was the principal speaker with his latest pictures of the Canadian Northwest, which are of intense interest to all outdoor lovers.

Dr. A. W. Easton, president of the Norway-Paris Club, and delegate to the Atlantic City convention, returned on July 5th, tired but happy and enthusiastic. Dr. Easton says the Maine Clubs were very much pleased in the election of Ernest McGregor as International Trustee. In talking the convention over with some of "the boys" since his return, Dr. Easton mentioned the interesting talk given by George Coe, President of Fryeburg and Lovell Club, on club problems at the Conference of the Club presidents of class three group.

Lieutenant Governor B. G. McIntire of the 7th division was also quite happy on his return from the convention. He reported that 13 out of the 14 Maine Clubs were represented at the convention. Bert was also quite pleased that a Maine girl, Miss Marion Lewis, daughter of Caleb Lewis, President of Waterville, Maine Club, received special mention in the Kiwanis Bulletin, of her soprano solo rendered at the New England District dinner on Tuesday.

Both President Arthur Easton and Lieutenant Governor B. G. McIntire are looking forward very happily to the proposed Inter-Club meeting between the State Border Clubs of Maine and New Hampshire. This is being sponsored by the Berlin, N. H. Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Maford Mann and his mother, Mrs. Emma H. Mann, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kneeland and son Walter were at Bryant Pond, Sunday, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Mann. Mrs. Maford Mann sang at the Universalist church at West Paris, Sunday morning.

What Uncle Lem Says

Some of the Senators of the dominant party continue to oppose the ratification of the Treaty of London, despite the fact that if it fails, it would be a most serious blow to the success of the President's administration, and perhaps decisive of the national election in 1932. The Maine press of that party is strangely lukewarm in their support of the President, and chary of its criticism of our little Fred Hale. Your Uncle Lemuel, however, has no hesitation in speaking right out in meeting, when the occasion demands it, and making use of vinegar, so to speak, instead of soft soap and molasses. The following from the Baltimore Sun is reproduced here with great glee:

"George H. Moses", Senator from New Hampshire would be a brilliant politician if his endowment of horse sense were one-half equal to his circus talents"; and Freddy Hale, whom an inscrutable nature, designed for somebody's jumping-jack, and whom the mysteries of Maine politics and the Senate's seniority rule have placed at the head of the Naval Committee, where the admirals can jiggle and juggle him.", etc.

In fairness it should be stated that the opposition Senators under the lead of Robinson of Arkansas are patriotically standing up for the interests of the country and world peace, and if the treaty is ratified the credit will go largely to them, while the people without party distinction, must be greatly dissatisfied with the performance of George H. Moses, "Hi" Johnson and "Freddy" Hale.

The whipper snappers have been greatly stirred up the past week by the entrance into the Congressional contest in the 2nd District of Hon. Frederick P. Bonney of Rangeley, and there is talk among them of preventing his name from being placed on the official ballot through some technicality. Your Uncle Lemuel did not support Mr. Bonney at the primary election, but as neither of the three candidates then received a majority of the votes cast, we think Mr. Bonney has a moral as well as a legal right to appeal to the voters of the district at the general election in September. Under the primary system the people feel that they have rights which party leaders cannot take away from them. We believe it would be poor policy to shut Mr. Bonney out if it could be done, as his supporters might be enraged enough to put their votes where they would count in opposition. Uncle Lem.

DAUGHTERS OF UNION VETERANS NOTES

The Daughters of Veterans held regular meeting, Friday evening, the last meeting for the summer, adjourning until the last meeting in August. The Mystery box went to Mrs. Elizabeth Getchell.

It was voted to hold a summer sale, and the members from N. to S inclusive are included on the committee with Mrs. Bertha Noyes as chairman. An invitation was accepted to have an outing at the home of Mrs. Ada Trask, Norway Lake, Wednesday. An invitation was also received and accepted from J. L. Chamberlain Camp and Auxiliary, to attend the annual outing at Lake Tripp, Saturday, July 26. Other nearby Camps and Tents are invited. The outing will be held in the afternoon and evening with basket picnic supper. Plans will be made for transportation later.

After the meeting there was open session and a number of guests were present. The annual roll call of both Daughters and Sons was held followed by the following program:

Piano Solo..............Miss Rubira Sharon
Reading..............Miss Irene Grant
Encore, Piano Solo..............
Vocal Solo......Miss Frances M. McAllister
To her own accompaniment on the piano.
Piano Solo..............Miss Sharon
Vocal Solo..............Mrs. Betty Jacobs
Remarks..............Dr. C. L. Buck

The Daughters of Veterans had a very pleasant outing, Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. Ada Trask, Maple Lane Spring Farm, above Norway Lake village. The husbands were invited for supper and the evening. There were about thirty present. During the afternoon, all enjoyed the wonderful view of the lake and the foothills and mountains in the distance. The flight of an airplane and motor boat races on the lake could be watched. A fine supper was enjoyed and during the evening there was music, dancing and a social hour. An invitation has been received from J. L. Chamberlain Camp and Auxiliary to attend the annual outing at Lake Tripp, Saturday, July 26. Other nearby Tents and Camps are invited. Basket picnic supper.

Lloyd Fletcher, accountant for the Western Electric Co., New York City, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fletcher while having two weeks vacation.

Masters Roland and Arthur Roy, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roy, have returned from the Central Maine General Hospital, where they had tonsils and adenoids removed. They are making a fine recovery.

The King Arthur flour motor caliope was in town, Tuesday. A heroic figure of a medieval knight mounted on a horse was the outstanding picture on the chassis. An automatic pipe organ ground out decidedly modern selections, and for a wonder was in good tune.

Norway Churches

Methodist

Rev. W. Winslow Lyon, minister. 10.30 morning worship service, 12.00 Church Bible School, 7.30, evening song and gospel service.

There was an unusually good attendance last Sunday morning. Many of the newly arriving summer people were in attendance. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Lyon, took for his inspirational talk the message of Jesus in the Gospel of John, viz "it is the Spirit that giveth life." The adult vested choir rendered two splendid selections. The minister of the church and Rupert Aldrich are scheduled to sing together next Sunday morning a very beautiful selection entitled, "O Lord Remember Me," by Agnes L. Morton, the new organist at the Methodist church. All strangers and others without a church home are cordially welcome. Come when the bells call.

The Sunday evening meetings seems fair to outdo the morning services as far as the number of people are concerned. The biggest gathering so far this season since the new minister has been at the Methodist church was on hand at last Sunday nights meeting. The pastor usually leads in the singing. Then the men were asked to sing alone and they showed remarkable courage, while the women all came in on the chorus. The big auditorium was filed with song and harmony. The minister told the people last Sunday evening "that he believed that just as many people were sung into the Kingdom of Heaven as have been preached into it." A very pretty duet was sweetly sung by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morgan and the people spoke their appreciation. Mr. Morgan and his wife are members of the church choir. The pastor very vividly portrayed the parable of Jesus regarding the "Nobleman's healed Son." The big crowd eagerly listened in silence to follow the minister's message as he moved back and forth across the broad platform. Mr. Lyon is trying to make Sunday evenings the "evenings of song". He believes that good singing and good instrumental music is a wedge that enters every human heart. If you are blue; if you are lonely; if Sunday seems to drag on like a dull, long day; if you are discouraged and feel cast down in spirit, come to church. Apart from God there is nothing so satisfying and abiding. Next Sunday evening there will be special singing and lively congregational singing. Mr. Lyon will bring a spiritual message that will lift you up and Monday will seem to you a brighter day. Rev. Mr. Lyon is shouting from the housetops, "Good Folks of Norway, Come to Church."

The days of the Methodist camp meeting are fast drawing near. The place is Empire Grove, Poland. Shady and cool, good singing and excellent preaching. The camp meeting opens Sunday morning, July 27. Plan now to be there. Following is a list of speakers: Bishop John W. Hamilton, Sunday, July 27; Rev. John Richards, D. D., of New York; Mrs. Lucie Mears Norris, Boston, Mass., Rev. Harry N. McIntire of the Dudley Radio Carolers; Mrs. Gordon Wells of Providence, R. I., Musical Director; Mrs. Dorothy Wells of Portland, Young People's Work.

Saturday is Dollar Day

The South Paris Merchant's Association hold their annual Dollar Day, Saturday, July 19, and preparations for that event have been made. Generous discounts are offered and special sales will prove attractive in every store and business place.

Killed Bear With Target Rifle

Frank "Cye" McGinley, a teacher in Bangor High School and formerly of South Paris, shot a 300 pound bear with a 22 calibre magazine rifle, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. McGinley were on a motor camping trip at Chesuncook lake and while on a canoe excursion some fifteen miles to Pine River, observed the bear swimming across an inlet. Taking a chance he emptied the magazine into the tough body of the animal. One slug penetrated the jugular vein and this proved to be the lucky shot. The bear was towed to camp and dressed for the skin which is being made into a rug.

The vacationists also captured an Albino porcupine to be mounted for an ornament in their Bangor home.

A good house greeted Ethel May Shorey and her players in Association Hall, Monday evening. The play, "The Frame-up," with a large cast, was well received. Especially pleasing were the vaudeville between acts that kept the audience in a continuous laugh. An orchestra carried by the company was a strong feature. It was announced that a return engagement will be played July 28th

At a special town meeting Saturday, $3000 was raised for roads and to be assessed in 1931. As there was no one present to speak for a full time course in agriculture the article was passed over. One other article voted at the March meeting was rescinded and passed under slightly changed wording. This was to correct the illegality. Another special meeting is expected to be called at once as certain matters have come up since Saturday.

HARRISON

Attention Given to Teeth

A recent dental survey by the Maine State Department of Health shows that the children of Harrison are giving more attention to the care of their teeth than they previously did. The percentage of clean mouths has increased from 22 per cent. to thirty-five per cent. since 1928, and there are fifteen per cent. who apparently have no decayed teeth.

While this is an improvement over previous conditions, there is still a great deal more that needs to be done. Approximately sixty-five per cent. of the children do not keep their mouths clean, and thereby expose themselves to the possibility of infectious diseases. Eighty-five per cent. have decayed teeth, which, in themselves, are a distinct menace to health, and may be the cause of heart trouble, malnutrition and systemic disturbances.

The facts that eighty per cent. of the diseases which attack children enter their bodies through the mouth, nose or throat, and that ninety per cent. of all deaths are due to systemic conditions which originate in the mouth, only emphasize our concern for these children.

The child, who is suffering with a toothache, or who is dragged down by the poisons of abscessed or decayed teeth cannot keep up with the healthy child, and is likely to drop behind his class, becoming a "repeater".

"This summer vacation", says Mr. Monk, Superintendent of Schools, "affords a splendid opportunity for the parents of Harrison's children to attend to the needed dental care, and see that the children brush their teeth after each meal, actually chew fibrous and coarse foods to supply exercise for thier teeth, and eat quantities of fruits, vegetables and milk. This applies not only to the children who were in school last year, but to those entering this fall for the first time as well."

Children's Sunday—Guests at Norton's—Quiet Fourth.

July 7th was Children's Sunday. Rev. Arthur Callaghan baptised five. Four were the children of Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, while Mr. and Mrs. Orion Stanley claimed the little Gloria. After the baptism, Mr. Callaghan gave a short talk on "The Value of Childhood," which was followed by the children's concert, the children doing very nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Martin and son, Douglass, of Granby, Quebec, were the guests, recently, of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Norton. They came by automobile and enjoyed the scenery all the way. Mountains were as old friends, they having left some noble specimens where they came from.

Miss Polly Fitts, who was the guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Garner, returned Monday to her home in Haverhill.

Fourth of July was an uneventful day but a pleasant one and looked festive with flags fluttering in the breeze. A number of children of large growth attended the circus in Portland and the constant snapping of firecrackers consoled those who remained. It was a comfortable the Fourth, no rowdy canon on the hills to disturb the peacefullness of the day or night and no casualties. But the calm was broken about two in the morning when the peaceful slumbers of the whole village were roughly broken by the demonstration of the old adage, "Worth makes the man, want of it the fellow," by breaking the law, he gained access to the fire alarm and great was the commotion which followed.

Mrs. Ruth Wadsworth

Mrs. Ruth Wadsworth, aged 87 years, 8 months and 8 days, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leslie Warren, at Riverton, Monday, June 23. She was born in Hiram, the daughter of Silas and Hannah B. Durgin and was the last of a family of six children. In 1868 she was married to Arthur Wadsworth, who died Nov. 22, 1920.

The greater part of their life they lived in Hiram, later moving to Cornish, where Mrs. Wadsworth, with her daughter, Miss Nina Wadsworth, a teacher at Petersham, Mass., spent the summers. In all her years she was actively interested in all that savored of good and the many qualifications she possessed has built for her a lasting monument in the hearts of all who knew her. In her home she was a model of all that was lovable, noble and good. It was indeed a throne room where peace and contentment reigned supreme.

When sickness and death laid its paralyzing hand upon the home, her three daughters, Miss Nina Wadsworth, Cornish, Mrs. Jennie Chellis, Kezar Falls, and Mrs. Leslie G. Warren, Woodfords, to whom she so fondly clung, watched over her with most tender care.

Mrs. Wadsworth was a member of the Order of Eastern Star at Cornish. Funeral services were held at her home in Cornish, Thursday, June 26. Rev. Cymbrid Hughes of Portland officiating. W. T. Norton of Kezar Falls sang very feelingly two selections, 'Beautiful Isle of Somewhere'' and "God Will Take Care of You''. Interment was in the family lot at Riverside Cemetery, Cornish.

Miss Marion Ross of Camden is the guest of her aunt, Miss Bertha Ross.

Mrs. Emma Wadsworth entertained the Ladies' Circle, Tuesday afternoon, twenty-five members being present. They passed a happy session, reading selections, talking and sampling the good things passed around by the hostess.

Emma Fox, Vena Fox and Robert Fox enjoyed their vacation. It was a treat to be together at home and with their father and mother.

Samuel Johnson has been with friends in Gorham the past week, returning home the first of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Martin and son, Douglass returned from Yarmouth, Monday and took luncheon with their friends, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Norton according to schedule, and then "on again, off again'' to Granby, Quebec, where they were due Tuesday.

THREE-QUARTER CENTURY CLUB

The Maine Public Health Association, sponsor of the famous Three-Quarter Century Club, announces that Hon. Burleigh Martin of Augusta, has once again kindly consented to serve in the capacity of State chairman for the revision of the roster, preliminary to the annual meeting of the club, which is held in the city of Waterville on Friday, August 15, 1930. It further announces that Hon. Frank H. Holley of North Anson, who has served so efficiently for several years as state chairman of transportation, has again signified his williness to cooperate and will have charge of that phase of the day's program.

A representative from each county of Maine has already been appointed by Mr. Martin to handle the revision of the roster and by Mr. Holley to serve as transportation chairman for the county. A list of these citizens will be published as soon as it is learned whether they will serve on these committees or not. Frank Ballantyne of the Maine Automobile Association, has recently conferred with Mr. Holley, and will do everything he can to assist in the transportation of these worthy and venerable citizens of Maine who deserve all the attention that the younger generation can render.

It has been suggested that a new feature be added to the program for the annual meeting, therefor the feminine contingency is invited to bring with them, to the meeting, any piece of fancy work or hand work completed by them during the past year. An exhibition of these articles will be maintained; three Waterville ladies will act as judges, and a prize will be given to the club member who is the estimation of the judges is most deserving of winning the trophy.

Several splendid essays have already been received at the Central Office in Augusta, and this contest bids fair to be a close one. The two subjects presented for consideration this year are "How to Keep Well," and "The Essentials of Success." The only rules governing the contest are that the writers must be members of the Three-Quarter Century Club, which means that they must have celebrated their 75th birthday, and that the essays must be received at the Central Office of the Maine Public Health Association, on or before August 10th. The essays may be long or short, as the writer desires, as there is no word limit.

So far, but little has been done toward preparing the speaking program for the day, but it is the unanimous desire of the club members to invite Gov. Wm. Tudor Gardiner to be present, and give an address. A. M. Dunbar, President of the Club, is preparing a brief history covering its organization, which will be incorporated in the day's program. The Three-Quarter Century Club of St. Petersburg, Florida, wil again be asked to send a representative to attend the meeting on August 15th. Many members have expressed the hope that the representative may be Mrs. Evelyn Barton Rittenhouse, who has attended the last two sessions of the Maine Club, and who is a great favorite with the "boys" and "girls" of this state.

Washington's Way With Whiskey

By Don Seitz

When Alexander Hamilton, first Secretary of the Treasury under President George Washington, to quote Daniel Webster's eloquent phrase, "smote the rock of the national resources" from which "abundant streams of revenue gushed forth," the springs in one part of the fabric refused to flow. The region in Pennsylvania, west of the Alleghenies, centered about Pittsburgh, was inhabited by sturdy Scotch-Irish folk, who had early found rye their most profitable crop, and that its essence could be more cheaply carried over the mountains to the seaboard market in barrels than in grain. Accordingly, distilling of whiskey had become an important industry, strong enough to resent any interference by the tax gatherer. So early as 1756 the colony had attempted to collect a small excise tax, exempting drink distilled for home consumption from the levy. The canny Scots promptly returned all of their output as for this purpose, and got away with the evasion.

After the Revolution, the war debt made revenue a necessity, and Pennsylvania revived the tax. Collecting it proved a different matter. The section known as Washington, Westmoreland, Fayette, and Allegheny Counties, centered about Pittsburgh, rose in defense of the free flowage of rye. Excise agents were run out of the territory, sometimes on rails, with coats of tar on their persons, while judges who showed interest had their wigs singed. The tails of horses ridden by sheriffs were cut off, and interfering officials had live coals put in their boots, which they were then forced to put on. Further, the mobs set up liberty poles and shouted the battle cry of freedom.

As a result, the Legislature repealed the act, and rye crowed over its victory.

Now came Hamilton with a modest tax of four pence per gallon. This at once aroused the old antagonism. General John Neville, a distinguished and popular soldier, was made Internal Revenue Inspector for the western district in the hope that his influence would prevail, which it failed to do. Mass meetings were called, and soon the region was in revolt. The Scots flatly refused to pay the tax, and at once revived their former methods in dealing with officials. Washington was at Mount Vernon when advised by Hamilton of the disturbance.

He replied on September 7, 1792: "The last post brought me your letter of the 1st instant with the enclosures respecting the disorderly conduct of the western survey of the district of Pennsylvania, in opposing what is called the excise law; and the insults which have been offered by some of them to the officers who have been appointed to collect the duties on distilled spirits agreeably thereto. Such conduct in any of the citizens of the United States, under any circumstances that can well be conceived, would be exceedingly reprehensible; but when it comes from a part of the community for whose protection the money arising from the tax was principally designed, it is truly unaccountable, and the spirit of it must be regretted."

He did not waste time on regrets, however, but set on foot an immediate inquiry, "in order to a prosecution of the offenders," with instructions to smooth out the situation, if possible. "But," he added, "if, notwithstanding, opposition is still given to the due execution of the law, I have no hesitation in declaring, if the evidence of it is clear and unequivocal, that I shall, however reluctantly I exercise them, exert all the legal powers with which the Executive is invested to check so daring and unwarranted a spirit. It is my duty to see the laws executed. To permit them to be trampled upon with impunity would be repugnant to it; nor can government longer remain a passive spectator of the contempt with which they are treated. Forbearance, under a hope that the inhabitants of the survey would recover from the delirium and folly into which they were plunged, seems to have no other effect than to increase the disorder."

September 16, 1792, he issued a stiff proclamation, ordering stern steps to enforce collections. Spirits not stamped were to be seized, while it was forbidden to buy the unstamped article for the army or navy, then good customers. The rising was not allayed, but defied the government throughout the winter, and became aggressive in the spring. Armed forces came into play in resisting the collectors. The United States Court sat in Philadelphia, and cases failed through the prevention of the attendance of witnesses. Influential citizens who sought to support the law were imperiled. Finally a force surrounded General Neville's house and laid it under seige; in repelling, a killing resulted. Washington had to face the issue of a real rebellion against Federal law, for which he could not invoke the aid of the State militia unless an associate or district judge should certify it was needed to suppress insurrection.

By the advice of the cabinet such a certificate was procured, and the President proceeded to call on the States for men in sufficient number to face the sixteen thousand who lived in the whiskey belt. Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, and Pennsylvania herself were asked to contribute. Pennsylvania demurred, but Thomas Mifflin was governor, and one of Washington's supporters in the revolution. He made the Legislature act. These rallied, as a result, an army of fifteen thousand men. Light Horse Harry Lee, father of General Robert E. Lee, then governor of Virginia, led his men. Several other State executives marched with their troops. Major-General Henry Knox and General Daniel Morgan, of the famous rifle-men of the revolution, came to the standard. Washington proceeded to the camp at Carlisle, Pensylvania, to lead in person. From this point he wrote Morgan: "Although I regret the occasion which has called you into the field, I rejoice to hear you are there; and it is probable that I may meet you at Fort Cumberland, whither I shall proceed, so soon as I see the troops at this rendezvous in condition to advance. At that place, or at Bedford, my ulterior resolution must be taken, either to advance with the troops into the insurgent counties of this State, or to return to Philadelphia for the purpose of meeting Congress on the 3rd of next month. Imperious circumstances alone can justify my absence from the seat of government, whilst Congress is in session; but if these, from the disposition of the people in the refractory counties, and the state of the information I expect to receive at the advanced posts, should appear to exist, the less may yield to the greater duties of my office, and I shall cross the mountains with the troops; if not, I shall place the command of the combined force under the orders of Governor Lee, of Virginia, and repair to the seat of government.

"I am perfectly in sentiment with you, that the business we are drawn out upon should be effectually executed, and that the daring and factious spirit which has arisen to overturn the laws and to subvert the Constitution, ought to be subdued. If this is not done, there is an end of, and we may bid adieu to, all government in this country, except mob and club government, from whence nothing but anarchy and confusion can ensue. If the minority, and a small one, too, is suffered to dictate to a majority, after measures have undergone the most solemn discussions by the representatives o the people, and their will through this medium is enacted into a law, there can be no security for life, liberty, or property; nor, if the laws are not to govern, can any man know how to conduct himself with safety. There was never a law yet made, I conceive, that hit the taste exactly of every man, or every part of the community; of course, if this be a reason for the opposition, no law can be executed at all without force, and every man or set of men will in that case cut and carve for themselves, the consequences of which must be deprecated by all classes of men who are friends to order, and to the peace and happiness of the country."

Satisfied with the size and spirit of the army, Washington turned the command over to Lee and returned to Philadelphia, while the troops proceeded over the mountains.

Hamilton went with them. They reached Pittsburgh in November, 1794, but found the rebels scattered. The dragoons proceeded to round up the ring leaders, out of whom all the fight had oozed. Washington laid the emeute to the Democratic societies which had begun to form under the leadership of Thomas Jefferson. He wrote Burgess Hall, of Philadelphia, expressing his pleasure at the way the State had responded, and added his felicitations at "the spirit that so generally pervades the militia of every State," and of the "decided discountenance" the disturbers of public peace and order have met with in their attempts to spread their nefarious doctrines, with the view to poison and discontent the minds of the people against government; particularly by endeavoring to have it believed that their liberties were assailed, and that "all the wicked and abominable measures that can be devised under specious guises are practiced to sap the Constitution and lay the foundation of future slavery."

Of those who fomented this sort of thing, nowadays in frequent evidence, the Father of his Country had this to say in the same missive: "Can anything be more absurd, more arrogant, or more pernicious to the peace of society, than for self-created bodies, forming themselves into permanent censors, and under the shade of night in a conclave resolving that acts of Congress, which have undergone the most deliberate and solemn discussion by the representatives of the people, chosen for the express purpose and bringing with them from the different parts of the Union the sense of their constituents, endeavoring, as far as the nature of the thing will admit, to form their will into laws for the government of the whole; I say, under these circumstances, for a self-created permanent body (for no one denies the right of the people to meet occasionally to petition for or remonstrate against, any part of the Legislature) to declare that this act is unconstitutional, and that act is pregnant with mischiefs, and that all who vote contrary to their dogmas are actuated by selfish motives or under foreign influence, nay, are traitors to their country. Is such a stretch of arrogant presumption to be reconciled with laudable motives, especially when we see the same set of men endeavoring to destroy all confidence in the administration, by arraigning all its acts, without knowing upon what grounds or with what information it proceeds."

Thus it will appear there existed an illustrious precedent for the holders of the Presidential office since the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment, if they cared to exhibit the same energy and spirit that George Washington did in his view of duty.

Henry Niskanen of Hebron, aged 47 years, died, Sunday, at the C. M. G. Hospital at Lewiston, the result of gunshot wounds alleged to have been fired by Charles Gauthier of Turner early Saturday morning. The tragedy took place early Saturday morning at Gauthier's home on Snell Hill in Turner. This is located about two miles off the main highway and is known as Gauthierville. Versions of the affair differ but investigation by Sheriff Walton indicates that it was the result of an all-night drinking party which ended in a fight during which Gauthier used his shot gun upon his guests.

Readers who resolved to save some of their money during 1930 have time to begin, even if the year is half gone.

The Rise of Tom Hadley

Chapter IX

TOM'S HOME LETTER BETTY APPEARS

By C. F. Whitman

"Alderburg, Thursday p m.

"Dearest Mother:—I've struck a good position as temporary express agent while Mr. Moses Harris is sick and if he recovers Mr. Jarvis Benton will put me into his ready-made clothing store as chief clerk and general manager. He is the magnate of the place and what he says goes. He is not like the ordinary boss—arrogant and self-willed, but a fine gentleman in every way. Mrs. Benton is like you, motherly and thoroughly good. No one could help loving her. Charley, their son, is a splendid, manly fellow, just a little older than I am, and like a brother. He is smart and has a position as assistant cashier in the bank of which his father is president. Miss Maude Benton, his sister, is just the most beautiful young lady I have ever seen. She is charming, with the sweetest voice imaginable and about two years younger than I am. She is very modest in her ways and manners and a perfect lady. She dearly likes music and sings soprano. I do not know whether she is engaged to anyone, but whoever is lucky enough to get her will have a treasure. Don't think, mother, from what I've written, that I've quite lost my head over her. She is the magnate's pet and none of the family would think a fellow like me was good enough for her, and I really don't know of anyone who is. I am going to look up a boarding place near the express office this afternoon. The Bentons won't like it. They wouldn't charge me any board I feel sure, but I couldn't be so dependent upon them as that. I'll be dependent enough as it is upon Mr. Benton. Now you will be interested to learn how I got into the good graces of this fine family so soon. I have enclosed a message to dear Bessie, which will give you all, an account of my adventures since I left home, and all you will want to know about me up to date. Send my guitar to me by express.

Love to all.

Your affectionate son, Tom."

In Tom's note to his sister he told her all about what had befallen him and the securing of the tramps, whose trial was set down to take place on the following day. "Tell father," he wrote in closing, "that I will send him a copy of the Advertiser containing an account of it. Love to my sweet little sister.

From Tom"

After mailing his letter and attending to the express business for the afternoon Tom learned that Mrs. Ada Morton, a widow lady, living near, might receive him as a boarder and upon applying at her residence he was shown some commodious and furnished rooms, fronting to the south, that he might obtain at a fair rental. After consulting Mr. Benton and obtaining his approval, he secured the rooms and decided to occupy them at once. On going for his things at the Bentons, Tom found only the servant girl, Miss Annie White, at home—Miss Benton and her mother being out for a call. He was thus spared the unwelcome scene he had anticipated and was greatly relieved. He dissembled, however, and expressed to Annie his regret at their absence.

MRS. MORTON

Tom found Mrs. Morton a very agreeable lady. At her husband's death, she had been left in comfortable circumstances, but not very wealthy. Her residence was well furnished, though not in the Benton style. She did not live in the aristocratic part of the village, and seldom met the ladies of that class, except at church and church gatherings. She generally associated with the Unitarian church people, whose society for some time had been at a low ebb with no settled pastor. Mrs. Morton was a lady of taste and refinement and her home showed it. She was much pleased for social reasons to have the new village lion in her family. Her daughter, Betty, about twenty and her son, Robert, familiarly called Bob, in his sixteenth year, had had the best of home training. Betty, too, pert and pretty, had been for a period with an aunt in Boston, where she had obtained a splendid musical education, and her voice trained to sing alto. At one period Mrs. Morton had hoped that the magnate's son, Charley, the handsomest and most popular young man in the village, might show his attention to Betty, and it's altogether probable that Betty herself had secretly cherished the same wish. The mother, no doubt thought it would be most desirable to be intimately connected with the first family of the place. Bob was an exemplary young fellow of his age and became a great favorite of Tom, who saw in him the promise of future eminence and usefulness. This family had not, before the coming of Tom, been very much on the front pages of the local newspaper, nor in the public eye, or prominent in social circles but now all this was to be changed, thanks largely to the resourcefulness of the capable and accomplished Betty. When Tom wrote home again to his folks, he informed them how pleasant his situation was in this fine family and how much he enjoyed it.

Charley called to see Tom that evening at his boarding place. He greeted him with: "So you took French leave of us, Tom. The mater is awfully cut up and feels it keenly. Had to call, old man, to see how you are situated,"—(gazing around the rooms)—"cozy and comfortable, by George. A woman of taste has arranged all this, I know, and—" Tom interrupting:—"Let me answer your questions as you go along. If I don't I shan't catch up for the evening. As to taking French leave I didn't know that your mother and Maude were out for a call, when I went for my things. Sorry to disappoint your good mother, Charley. She has been very kind to me, as all of you have. Yes, this is cozy and comfortable here, but not so elegant as up at the great house, but it is good enough for me or anybody else. They are nice and refined people here—have taste and all that and I like them very much, but they and no others will ever take the place of your folks with me."

"Glad to hear you say that, old man. We consider you one of the family." They heard playing on the piano and singing in another part of the house. "Who is that?" inquired Charley.

"I suppose it is Miss Morton. You have heard of course, that she has a fine musical education, and can both play and sing splendidly."

"Oh, Betty, is it? We were classmates at school. She has been away for several years, living with an aunt in Boston. I ought to have called on her. Guess I'd better do it now, as I'm here."

"Certainly, go ahead, she'll probably be glad to see you, Charley." She was, but she didn't show it. She felt piqued at his neglect and meant to treat him cooly as he deserved. Their colloquy is worthy of note here:

Charley: "Hello, Betty. Glad to see you. It has been a long time since we met."

BETTY

Betty: "Now do you think I'm going to believe that you are really glad to see me after all your neglect? And whose fault is it that we haven't met, I'd like to know."

Charley: "Mine of course. The same saucy Betty, and—and prettier and more attractive than ever, by George."

Betty: "Bosh, 'Handsome Charley', I don't care for such bouquets. They don't mean anything."

Charley: "Oh, yes they do, but cut out please, calling me that, I got sick of it long ago. But Betty you are positively a beauty, and a very charming lady."

Betty: "Wish I believed you were sincere, Charley."

Charley: 'I am, Betty, upon my honor."

Betty: "You have been a long time finding it out, I must say."

Charley: "I've always known it—from way back in our school days."

Betty: "Now I don't believe a word you have said, for if you had thought what you say, you would not have neglected me all these years as you have done. We used to be quite intimate you know, in those days."

Charley: "Certainly, we were and will be again unless you resent my falling from grace, which I won't do again, I promise you."

Betty: "I'll wait and see. Did you come down here thinking to see me, tonight? Was it not the village hero, Mr. Tom Hadley you came to see? Be honest with me, Charley."

Charley: "I did come to see Tom, that is true, but I thought as long as I was here, I might kill two birds with one stone, as the old saying is."

Betty: "Well, Charley, you can't kill this bird in that way—all or none."

Charley: "All right, Betty, I'll observe what you say and heed it, too. The next time I come here, which will be very soon, it will be especially to see you."

He bade her goodnight, and thus the interview ended. He did not think it best at that time, from her somewhat curt manner to him to say to her that she would be a great addition to their musical set, but to Tom he said:

"Do you realize what my renewing of my acquaintance at this time with Betty means? She can sing alto and is just the one we want to complete our musical company. We shall then have all the four parts to make up a quartette—soprano, tenor, alto and bass. She was so pointed with me, that I didn't think it best to say anything to her about her singing with us, but the next time I see her I will."

"That will be capital," replied Tom, "if you can induce her to join us. You will have to handle her with gloves on, I guess, Charley, for she is evidently high spirited and has a mind of her own. You say that she was pointed with you, she has not appeared that way to me."

"But you are different, Tom. We were classmates at school and pretty near to sweethearts, then, but since, by her being away, and busy matters with me, I have not kept in touch with her as I should have done. She has blossomed out to be a great beauty and can sing splendidly as we have heard and is very attractive. Probably she feels that I've neglected her, but you can bet, old man, that I'll make up for lost time if I'm permitted to restore my former relations with her."

Tom: "Ah, Charley, I see how it is. Success to your efforts and my best wishes. She is worthy of you or any young fellow whom I know."

The fact was as Charley had declared, Betty had greatly improved during the time she had been in Boston society and her beauty, charming manners and piquent language had made a deep and lasting impression upon Charley's heart, so that her alto singing and joining their musical set with him was really quite a secondary matter, all of which was clearly evident to Tom.

Fryeburg in the Civil War

Second Prize

(The following essay was awarded second prize in a contest among all seventh grade pupils of the town of Fryeburg. This essay was submitted by Linwood Shaw of the North school.)

They came in true devotion
To their country's sacred cause—
To maintain, midst war's commotion,
Its flag, its fame, its laws.

These words may be aptly applied to the town of Fryeburg, as she was one of only four towns in Oxford County to send a surplus in addition to her quota, when her sons were called to take their part in preserving the Union.

If we had existed in eighteen hundred and sixty-one, we might recall November the fifteenth. It was a beautiful day with a cloudless sky and cooling breeze. Our town was aroused to the highest pitch of excitement, hilltops and valleys were resounding with patriotic music, even the air was filled with patriotism and mothers, wives and sisters, alive with the same spirit, proud of the opportunity to make any sacrifices, gladly offering all that was dear to them, cheering many noble sons who were marching forth into Camp Abraham Lincoln, in Portland, Me., with the star spangled banner flying high and their voices rending the heavens with the war song, "We Conquer or We Die."

Among these brave sons we would have noticed a nice looking fellow about six feet tall. This fellow we would have recognized as the late Seth C. Farrington, who was later officered as captain of the Twelfth Regiment. Perhaps it would be well to say, "Mr. Farrington was one of Fryeburg's former teachers." He taught several successful term of school at the Toll Bridge and West Fryeburg schools. Perley Barker of Fryeburg, who was also a volunteer, attended the school at Toll Bridge when Capt. Farrington taught.

On the twenty-fourth of November, they left Portland for Massachusetts, going into Camp at Lowell, where they remained until the latter part of December, when they proceeded to Boston and embarked on board steamship Constitution for Ship Island, which is situated at the mouth of the Mississippi, at which place they arrived on the twelfth of February.

The regiment remained at Ship Island engaged in perfecting itself in drill and discipline until May fourth, when it went to New Orleans, which city had then fallen into possession of the North.

Landing, on the ninth of May, they were stationed at the United States branch mint, relieving the police and performing guard duty.

On the twenty-second of June, Lieut. Col. Kimball, with six companies of the Twelfth Regiment, was sent to pass Manchac, on an expedition which resulted in a complete success. Two batteries, consisting of six thirty-two pounders, were captured, together with a large amount of ordinance stores, camp equipment and a stand of colors. The bridges, depot and other buildings were destroyed in this vicinity. A rebel Colonel was also taken with eight thousand dollars in Confederate currency.

This brilliant achievement was brought to the attention of the War Department and the captured colors were ordered to be kept in the possession of the Twelfth Regiment for their gallantry. These colors were forwarded to Maine and added to the collection of trophies in the hands of the state.

Major Strong, on the thirteenth of September, embarked on the afternoon of that day with companies C, D and F of the Twelfth Maine, with their captains, Thorton, Winter, and Farrington, for Ponchatoula, which is situated forty-eight miles north of New Orleans. They met the enemy on entering Ponchatoula. In charging, Capt. Thorton received three wounds and was obliged to retire from the field. His company, then under Lieut. Hight, reinforced Capt. Farrington's company that had gained a position on the enemy's right, Lieut. Coan with his company, took position on the left of the enemy's line. From these positions our troops poured in so deliberate and destructive a fire that the enemy were forced from the field.

The latter part of the second year of war, Mr. Barker was taken ill and was ordered North by Dr. Seth C. Gordon, also of Fryeburg. Upon the authority of Dr. Gordon's orders, Mr. Barker was given an honorable discharge because of his physical disability.

Tobias Eastman now living at Fryeburg, should not go unmentioned, although he enlisted from Lovell he was in the Twelfth Regiment, Company F, with many of our own boys.

There were twenty Fryeburg boys in the Seventeenth Regiment Infantry. Wm. Jenkins was First Lieutenant of Company B. Fryeburg was also represented in the Twenty-third, fifth, seventh, ninth, eleventh, thirteenth and sixteenth regiments.

On October seventeenth eighteen hundred sixty-three, fourteen Fryeburg boys responded to the call of their country. Twenty-two citizens of Fryeburg enlisted in the regiments of other states. Among these were John W. Towle, John Webster and Charles H. Powers.

Our boys occupied an important position in each of the following battles: Battles of Bull Run, Gettysburg, Williamburg, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville.

An interesting story is told of Marcus Smart, of Fryeburg, who was doing picket duty one moonlight night near Mount Vernon and had been engaged in several slight skirmishes with the enemy during the time. The moon was low and in a very deceptive sheen of mist and fog. Mr. Smart had paced along well into the night when he discovered a moving object which, on nearer approach, he concluded was some prowling rebel, and cried out, "Halt! Who goes there? Give the countersign," at the same time raising his musket to pop the seemingly rebel. Taking good aim, he discharged his musket to and brought down the rebel, which proved to be a nice big, fat hog, which, being severely wounded, awakened the whole picket line with his cries.

We can honestly say in the terrible struggle when desperate rebellion had clutched at the throat of our government and threatened to destroy all our blessed institution, the blood of the sons of Fryeburg has flowed freely in their defense. Several, to their dying day, bore marks of honorable wounds received at Fredericksburg and on the glorious fields of Gettysburg, while others have fallen, giving life as a willing sacrifice on the altar of their country.

Personally, I do not believe there are any more Civil Wars before us, but we must be prepared for what God brings us and be true to ourselves, our Country, and our God, now that

No more shall the war cry sever
Nor the winding river be red;
They banish our anger forever,
When they laurel the grave of our dead

Another petrified forest, the only one so far discovered with the trees lying as they fell millions of years ago, is reported to the U. S. Forest service. The forest, which covers several acres, was found by a road-building expedition on the lower Yellowstone reclamation project. Some of the trees are 10 feet in diameter and more than 100 feet long.

CENSUS TEACHES NEED OF DIVERSITY

Preliminary returns from the Federal Census which have been announced during the past few weeks, give an encouraging picture of progress and growth in New England. There are, of course, cities and towns where no appreciable gain is noted and there are some which have experienced losses during the past decade.

The most striking lesson to be learned thus far from the 1930 census returns is the danger to an industrial community of lack of diversity in manufacturing. Unsatisfactory conditions in the textile industry have resulted in a marked falling off in population in many textile cities.

Another tendency indicated by the early returns is a fairly definite drift of population from the very small rural communities to communities with a population of over 5,000. An examination of 400 returns from all over New England shows that 45 per cent. of those communities having a population of less than 5,000 showed decreases in population. Of the communities with a population of more than 5,000 approximately 82 per cent. reported increases.

Farmers are now hopefully expecting to get a profit next fall, regardless of what happens to the tariff.

Oxford County United Parish

Embracing Albany, North Lovell, Stoneham and the Waterfords. Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. I. Bull, A. C. Townsend, Ralph A. Brandon; Miss Mary A. Beals, Summer Assistant.

The Daily Vacation Bible School is now in its second week at the Wilkins House, Waterford. Nearly fifty children are enrolled. Transportation to this school is being entirely furnished by the Pastoral Staff, thus lessening the expense. The teaching staff consists of the pastors, Miss Beals, Mrs. Brandon, Annie Gardiner and Virginia Tyler. After three weeks at Waterford, there will be a similar course at East Stoneham. This course will probably involve some expense for transportation, and contributions would be appreciated.

Last Sunday morning there was a large attendance at the Waterford church, including about 100 girls from Camps Kokosing and Konewago. It was Mr. Brandon's first service in this pulpit.

Last Sunday was Children's Day at North Waterford, and an excellent program was carried through under the direction of Miss Beals. This school will not be closed during the summer months.

On Thursday evening there will be a Circle supper at Waterford, and one also at East Stoneham, followed by a social by the Keewaydin Club. On Thursday at the vestry in East Stoneham, Mrs. Laura Best, County Nurse, will conduct a Child Health Conference with the assistance of a physician. This will take the place of the regular fall examination, and is put thus early in order that any children found defective can be attended to before the opening of the school year. The conference will begin at 9 a. m., and is for all school and pre-school children. It is hoped that parents will see that their children are there to be examined. A similar conference will be held in Albany on Friday of this week. Dates for Waterford and North Waterford will be announced later.

On next Sunday Rev. Mr. Bull will be absent and Miss Beals will conduct the morning service at Waterford. Mr. Brandon will be at East Stoneham and Albany; Mr. Townsend at North Lovell and North Waterford. All-the-Parish Sunset service at some lake shore spot at South Waterford is being planned for next Sunday, if fair.

Radcliffe Chautauqua will be at Waterford, August 1, 2, and 4. An All-the-Parish service will be arranged for in the tent on that Sunday.

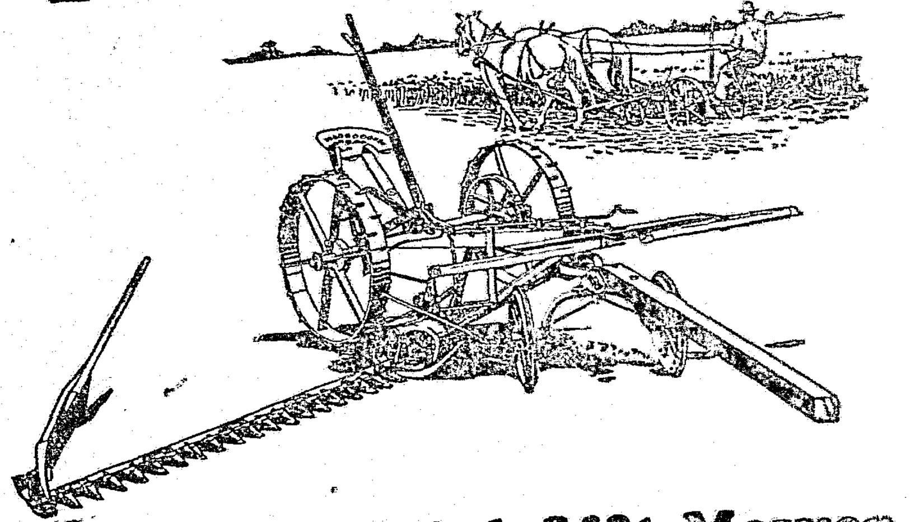
Handles Easier—Does Better Work



John Deere High-Lift Mower

(Equipped with Tongue Truck)

If you want to do a better job of mowing this year and for many years to come, go into your fields with a John Deere High-Lift Mower equipped with the quick-turn tongue truck.

The quick-turn tongue truck saves the horses and results in better work. The flexibly-mounted axle permits truck wheels to hold to the ground. There is no neck weight on the horses, and whipping of pole is eliminated. The truck always keeps the front end of mower frame at the correct height.

The improved lift on the John Deere is surprisingly easy to operate. By only slight pressure on the foot-lift you raise the bar high enough to pass over ordinary obstructions and when you put the hand-lift into use, the bar is easily raised to extreme height—the inner shoe is raised high enough to pass over any obstruction that can be cleared by the doubletrees and the knife continues to operate in this position.

Other advantages include balanced drive gears, which reduce wear and insure smooth running; special location of bevel pinion, which prevents end thrust; and 21-point clutch, which insures instant starting. All adjustments are made with ordinary tools.

We'll be glad to show you this improved mower.

Fast Ball Game—Callers at Bartlett's

On Thursday evening of last week, there was a fast ball game at the Sumner Athletic grounds, when Silas Keniston's Mill Rats played the Metropolitans of East Sumner. The home team was as follows:

Vernon Redding, pitcher.
Lovell Chandler, catcher.
Vernal Chandler first base.
Clarence Waterhouse, second base.
A. McMorrell, third base.
Jerry Bartlett, right field.
Virgil Rowe, center field.
Bob Chase, short stop.
Harlan Redding, umpire.

The visitors made the Rats step some in the final inning and at the close of the game the score stood 12 to 13 in favor of the home team. The boys say the reason for the score runing high was on account of the grounds being in bad condition caused by heavy rain fall the day before. They also say owing to this game being put on at so quick notice there was not the usual large attendance so commonly present at this popular ball field.

Early Sunday morning, Mr. Ring, who drives the large pair of bay horses at the birch mill, started for Locke Mills to assist in haying for the Tebbets Co. Mr. Cummings also went with him, and that afternoon Olpha Varney, with his truck, went to Locke Mills and brought back the large grey horse to use here at the mill during the absence of the bays.

Mrs. Silas Keniston drove down from Locke Mills, Saturday afternoon in her handsome car with the mill pay roll. Their son was here with his father most of the week. Young Keniston, whose first name the writer cannot recall at this time, is well interested in mill work mixed in with fishing and mountain climbing.

Callers at Emerson Bartlett's, Sunday, were Cal. Russell and sons, Charles and Emerson Russell. Cal. told us all about the awful slump in beef prices; Olpha and Floyd Varney, Charne Farrar, Omar Farrar and Miss Evelyn Poland, locals; Mr. and Mrs. Tenis Blanchard and Mr. and Mrs. Goodie of Mexico; Walter Howard and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Winnie Howard and children, Misses Betty, Marguerite and Walter of Ridlonville; and Guy Johnson of Peru, it being 15 years since we met. Mr. Johnson was in the west for ten years, while at this time he is a salesman for the Israelson Motor Co. of Rumford.

Golf Links and Birds

Birds Needed to Help the Greens Committee

From England we are getting reports of masterly golf. At Glen Head, Miss Helen Hicks was reported to have holed three "birdies" in a row. A different kind of birdie and a different use for golf courses are appropriately discussed just now in a phamphlet of the National Association of Audubon Societies. It is a charming little book, filled with pictures of the birds commonly found near golf links, and all the golf clubs in the country should be grateful to the hundred or more that asked the association to prepare instructions for turning golf courses into bird canctuaries.

Suggestions are offered in a way to appeal to all kinds of golfers—practical, romantic or nature-loving. It is essential that the presence of numerous birds, and the shrubbery, bird baths and other devices for their protection, should not interfere with the game. Golfers are already accustomed to seeing birds about, for most clubs are well situated to encourage them. By the addition of safe nesting places, food-bearing trees or vines, or shallow pools and streams suitable for bird baths, and by getting rid of cats and other bird enemies, almost any golf club becomes an ideal bird sanctuary. The slight expense of these measures and the existence of a few hackberry trees, thorn apples or dead trees for the hole-nesting species will not inconvenience the players. Most birds prove themselves useful assistants to the greens committee, paying for their keep by freeing the turf of ant mounds and worm castings.

Some people have the notion that a bird sanctuary must consist chiefly of a tangle of undergrowth. But birds are found in the greatest numbers, not in the deep woods, but in the edges of woodland, in clumps of mulberries or dogwood, in open pastures dotted with a few trees that give them berries, and in areas that combine open, sunny spaces with shelter, food and water. As soon as a large bird population has been built up by the addition of whatever may have been lacking to draw them, their enemies must be cleared out. Just as they are attracted by a good feeding ground, so are cats, rats, weasels and other creatures that like a plump bird for dinner. Practical and humane directions for keeping the enemies within bounds are detailed in the booklet. It is pleasant to note that wholesale killing of red squirrels, hawks, owls, foxes, racoons and other animals that occasionally catch birds is not advocated. Usually an individual is responsible for the reputation of a whole race of rodents or birds of prey, and it is not hard to discover the culprit with a taste for song birds and let the rest go. Sling-shots and air-guns do not kill many birds, but are most disturbing to their peace of mind, and fear will drive them away as rapidly as actual harm.

The association tactfully points out that golf is the game of intelligent men, often the leaders of their community. A bird sanctuary is a resource and a benefit to all members of the neighborhood and children brought up near one learn to love and protect the feathered friends who devour so many mosquitos, destructive beetles and grubs. It is proposed that the bird lovers to be found in every golf club form the bird sanctuary committee and get in touch with the association, which will help in the selection of attractions needed locally.

OUR JULY CLEARANCE SALE

TO CONTINUE A FEW DAYS LONGER

Our Job For July is to Reduce Stock

and the only way to do it right and quickly is to "cut prices". We don't mince matters, we just go to it, and you, the purchaser, reap the benefit. We've been doing it for several years.

"Practice Makes Perfect," ought to be our slogan.

Every department takes part in this clearance and stock adjustment, offering many special opportunities and savings, in many instances of 25 to 50 per cent., or even more in some instances. Come and get your share.

Summer Coats

All at greatly reduced prices, only a little more than half the rightful price is asked. If you have been waiting for this, now's your opportunity.

Silk Dresses

Many of them now marked quite a little under regular value, meaning worthwhile savings to you.

House and Porch Dresses

We have 275 of these dresses for your selection, priced as low as $1.00 and up to $4.75 each. Girls' dresses from 2 to 14 years in a good assortment for your selection, including the little brother and sister suits.
